

Another London Magazine

Special Royal *Addition***

Excitement builds outside St Mary's Special report
page 2

Come on

GO ON KATE!

bikini body
ready?
10 top tips
for beating the muffin top
page 10

East London's 5 favourite
'Hipster' cocktails
page 30

The Lindo Wing of St Mary's Hospital, London.

Unless you've been living under a rock for the past few months, you will have noticed that the Royal family are expecting a new addition. Kate's due date is fast approaching and we've sent our team to the private Lindo Wing at St Mary's Hospital in Piccadilly. There's been plenty of speculation over when Kate will go into labour, so we've been on standby for a week to bring you all the goss.

The Royal family have always had a huge fan base from across the globe, and Royal baby number 2 is no exception! We managed to have a quick chat with one of the most photographed lady's at St Mary's (besides Kate, of course) Margaret Tyler. "I'm so thrilled for baby number 2, and i've got a feeling we will be celebrating a little brother for gorgeous Prince George."

Although Margaret isn't one of the many camping outside the hospital, she's up at the crack of dawn to eagerly await news on the prince or princess. Margaret wearing her royal outfit and printed t-shirt of Prince George which reads 'I was here first!'

Kate's rumoured due date is several days away, fans from all over the world have set up camp outside the hospital, using benches for beds, and setting up tents. There's Royal memorabilia and good luck signs everywhere!

While the Royal Family and everyone around them have kept tight lipped on the gender of the baby, it hasn't put a stop to people attempting to read tea leafs, observe Kate's bump and how high it is (apparently if a woman carries her bump quite high up it could signify she's having a boy, who knew?!) and put money on at the bookies.

As the due date gets nearer the bookies are now taking bets on baby names as well as gender, with Diana being in the running as a possible middle name.

With the days counting down, the media presence is growing by the minute. News anchors from around the world are turning up in droves to capture the atmosphere of this historical event. From radio stations to TV anchors, everyone wants a piece of the action.

The paparazzi have a great comradery with one another, and pass the time with endless newspapers an abundance of coffee and a good old gossip. They move in packs of 3 or 4 and usually have a minimum of 2 cameras each. We couldn't help but wonder if this cosy relationship is put to the test when they're fighting for 'THE SHOT'.....

(Above) What Royal event would be complete without the legend that is Royal Photographer Arthur Edwards - who is fast becoming somewhat of a celebrity himself! Arthur has been interviewed by all the major TV crews in the build up for the Royal Baby.....

In what feels like a matter of minutes the worlds press are set up and ready to project one of the most anticipated moments in Royal history to all corners of the world. It is literally a waiting game now. We know Kate is in the Lindo Wing of St Mary's, and there's only one way out - through the iconic double doors and into the media spotlight.

UPDATE: KATE MIDDLETON HAS GONE INTO LABOUR AND WAS ADMITTED TO THE LINDO WING AT 6AM THIS MORNING....

As the hysteria grows , so does the police presence. Its a very unintrusive presence - but it's there. In this day and age an event as big as this must require extensive security planning and positioning.

The routine checks are extremely thorough. There's dog units positioned at one end of the street, and officer policing the crowds. Every traffic cone is carefully inspected for any kind of terrorism device or weapons.

It's not long now until we will meet the newest member of The Royal Family, be it boy or girl, the public wait with baited breathe.....